

SOME THINGS THAT WERE SAID IN THE LOCAL CHURCHES.

The Free Art concert at the People's church last evening drew a crowded house. The program was rich and varied. Leo Brown and Leonard Fardy received a most emphatic encore. Their playing was one of the most pleasing events of the evening. Miss Edith Palmer rendered an excellent selection in a way very strong and pleasant.

Rev. Mr. Southworth spoke for ten minutes on "Religious Progress, in part as follows:

Things which are really alive are sure to grow. The more life a thing has, the more it will grow. The less life it has, the sooner it is ready for burial. When a thing stops growing it begins to die.

In this respect churches are like other things. The church will grow if it is really alive. But you can dwarf anything by putting a stop to its development. A tree can be stunted, or a child, or a church. Just build a roof over the tree; put the child into a straight-jacket; or say to the church "thus far and no farther," and you've made dwarfs of them. It never was intended that a church should be stunted in its growth, any more than that a child should be kept from growing.

There is not a church in Christendom that has not grown, that is not today different from what it was in the beginning. Christianity itself has developed. There has been a steady growth of new methods, new ideas, and new doctrines in the church.

Church More helpful.
The church of today is vastly more thoughtful, more practical, more human and helpful than ever it was before. In all denominations there has come to be a liberal and reasonable spirit which a hundred years ago was not to be found anywhere.

A hundred years ago people went to church from fear, more than from love. They went because they wanted to be saved when they were dead—saved from the wrath of God, from the fire that is not quenched. Today people do not go to church because they are frightened. You cannot scare folks now with the dreadful doctrine of everlasting torment. Today the church must meet the people squarely. Must appeal to their passions not to fear or to selfish desire to be happy in eternity, but to their good sense, to their rational judgment, to their reason and conscience. Everything that was said in the creeds and articles of faith a few years ago was then considered by years ago as a necessary—but today—with few exceptions the old rigid interpretations have been modified and changed and accepted in a figurative way, and are some men at reservation.

All Churches Become Liberal.
All the churches have become liberal in this matter of doctrine. You can believe almost anything and be a member of any church. The creeds and confessions of faith are still maintained; but with the understanding that they are only of "historic value."

Calvinism has been sweetened and brightened and the good Presbyterians do not delight themselves as formerly in lurid ruminations on "the awful fate of sinners in the hands of an angry God."

Baptists have softened their shells—"close communion" has been modified into only a "restricted" communion and you can hardly find a "Baptist" who believes that baptism is a saving "ordinance."

And so with our wide awake Methodist friends—you no longer hear of people being turned out of the church because they go to the theater or play cards or dance. And you can find hundreds of good Methodists who indulge in these innocent amusements in spite of rules of "the discipline."

What does it mean? Why it means that religion is growing more important and that "theology" is becoming less important. It means that forms and formulas are not so lifeless and hardened but that the real spirit of simple piety can rise above them.

Forms are Elastic.
Not so many years ago the form was unyielding and the formulas were strictly interpreted. Now they have grown elastic and are put forward rather as "historic" customs and traditions, than because of and special importance in themselves.

The churches have become more friendly towards each other. There is less hostility and less unkind rivalry. The Christian world is getting away from its medieval entanglements and all the antagonisms of the early protestant days. They are finding that religion consists in something more than words. That it is a matter of life—of real action. Character and helpfulness and generosity are a thousand times more essential than any doctrine ever invented. What a man is in his daily life counts for more than what he says on Sunday.

The churches have all come to see that to do good, to make one's life useful, to do the right thing always and everywhere, to love God and your neighbor, is more than all creeds and ceremonies put together. So far as religion is concerned it makes very little difference what ones theological or ecclesiastical preferences may be. Good men and women—people of noble impulses and generous nature—people of broad intelligence and cordial sympathies can be found in all churches. And really the only thing (or the principal thing) that separates the men and women of the various denominations today is the names, the labels, the pet phrases. We do not disagree in our real thoughts so much as in our way of expressing ourselves. And if the theologians and ministers of the various churches would only quit fighting about names the good men and women of this world soon see the folly of sectarian divisions.

Church's Position Defined.
Our position as a People's church is just this: "In essentials unity; in non-essentials liberty; and in all things charity." We refuse to quarrel over theological doctrines. Our work is to help men and women to develop to the best that is best in their natures. The only thing we insist upon in this church is that every one shall make some real efforts to be good, and to do good. The concert program:

AT THE FIRST M. E. CHURCH.
Pastor Thompson and Rev. Mr. Chase, a Missionary, Preach.

In the morning the pastor of the First M. E. church, Rev. H. W. Thompson, preached a sermon very appropriate to the day, he said that this being the last Sabbath of the year it would be proper to look over the past and toward the future. The year had passed an epoch in our lives and it is that they are only of "historic value."

Calvinism has been sweetened and brightened and the good Presbyterians do not delight themselves as formerly in lurid ruminations on "the awful fate of sinners in the hands of an angry God."

Baptists have softened their shells—"close communion" has been modified into only a "restricted" communion and you can hardly find a "Baptist" who believes that baptism is a saving "ordinance."

And so with our wide awake Methodist friends—you no longer hear of people being turned out of the church because they go to the theater or play cards or dance. And you can find hundreds of good Methodists who indulge in these innocent amusements in spite of rules of "the discipline."

What does it mean? Why it means that religion is growing more important and that "theology" is becoming less important. It means that forms and formulas are not so lifeless and hardened but that the real spirit of simple piety can rise above them.

Forms are Elastic.
Not so many years ago the form was unyielding and the formulas were strictly interpreted. Now they have grown elastic and are put forward rather as "historic" customs and traditions, than because of and special importance in themselves.

The churches have become more friendly towards each other. There is less hostility and less unkind rivalry. The Christian world is getting away from its medieval entanglements and all the antagonisms of the early protestant days. They are finding that religion consists in something more than words. That it is a matter of life—of real action. Character and helpfulness and generosity are a thousand times more essential than any doctrine ever invented. What a man is in his daily life counts for more than what he says on Sunday.

The churches have all come to see that to do good, to make one's life useful, to do the right thing always and everywhere, to love God and your neighbor, is more than all creeds and ceremonies put together. So far as religion is concerned it makes very little difference what ones theological or ecclesiastical preferences may be. Good men and women—people of noble impulses and generous nature—people of broad intelligence and cordial sympathies can be found in all churches. And really the only became quiet. At the wedding in Cana of Galilee when he caused the water to become wine, he only did, in a few moments, what nature could have done in process of time by producing a grape and putting it through the process of fermentation.

The Christian Endeavor meeting, being the last of the year, was a summing up of the truths learned during the year, and a talk of resolutions for the coming year. One member voiced the sentiment of many in expressing the resolution to be more definite in purpose and more helpful.

The local Union will hold the annual election of officers in the parlors of the Presbyterian church Tuesday evening. All are cordially welcome.

THEIR LAST TASTE OF LEAP YEAR JOY

JANESVILLE MAIDENS ACT THE MARK HIGH.

The Farewell Party a Success in Every Respect—Not a Detail Was Neglected That Would Add to the Pleasure of the Coy and Shrieking Young Men.

Not while the memory of Janesville's farewell leap year party lingers can chivalry perish from the earth.

Standing in the shadow of eight years of blighting masculine domination one hundred maids and matrons gave a charming exemplification of the heights to which consideration and delicate attention might be carried. They organized such a transport service that no blushing or apprehensive young man could fret over the tardiness of his escort. They added beauty to the Armory by the glossy green of palms. They put Johnny Smith on his mettle and selected music for each number that set the most irresponsible foot to tapping.

In a word—they neglected nothing. They said dancing should begin at eight and at eight it began.

They said all the tickets must be secured in advance, and Saturday afternoon saw seventy dollars in the treasury, and a balance of $30 in sight, to be devoted to the Associated Charities.

The management of the party was in the hands of a committee of five, but the enthusiastic aid of five score helpers was had for the calling at any juncture. Those who shared in the pleasure of the evening were:

THE OVERFLOW OF LOCAL NEWS.

TRIBUTE IS PAID TO M. M. BOSTWICK

ETHICAL SOCIETY GATHER AT HIS BIER.

Noted Milwaukeeans Speak Lovingly of the Young Man whose Life Work Was So Suddenly Cut Short. Words of Praise From C. M. Payne and Others.

"For nearly two hours yesterday afternoon the body of Lecturer M. M. Bostwick lay in state at the Ethical building, surrounded by banks of green plants and flowers," says The Milwaukee Sentinel. "The seats were filled with members and friends who came to pay their last tribute to the dead. There was scarcely one whose eyes were not suffused with tears. At 3 o'clock Cassius M. Payne, the president of the society, stepped to the space in front of the seats near where the casket reposed and opened the meeting. It had fallen to his lot, he said, to begin the sad ceremonies, and he did not know what to say. The tenderest passages of Shakespeare lost much of their value if detached from the text and in speaking of the departed lecturer he could but feebly express his feeling. Occasions like the present were a part of our destiny and were to be borne with fortitude, yet not without grief. Our emotions were the best of our natures. Therefore he believed in giving the feelings play, for after tears would come the calm of resignation."

"We here in Milwaukee only knew Mr. Bostwick a year, and yet it was long enough to understand him and to see that he was a man with a purpose. His convictions and his daily life were in accord; his part was more than well done. We couldn't have done without him and he couldn't have well done without us giving him the opportunity. This reciprocity made our relations firmer and pleasant. He was gifted with the rare ability to shape his own career and we who knew him are sorrowed in contemplating what seemed surely before him in the line of self-sacrificing effort he had chosen."

Tributes of Other Members.
"It seems as if our light had gone out," said Emanuel Kazenstein, the next to speak. "It seems as if we had lost our spiritual leader. The society loses, mankind loses by the loss of this good man. He was one of the best men I have ever met. He was entirely unselfish. He was the future light that is to lead mankind to all progress. He worked for this society night and day and there is no knowing what he might have done had his life been spared. I hope and I am sure that the seed he has sown will bring forth good fruit."

"He came into our lives and filled a void," said E. M. Katz. "To the many people who for various reasons feel unchurched, he was able to satisfy aspirations that had been unsatisfied. As one of the members of the board said last night, it seemed as he had come to supply spiritually what her whole life had been waiting for. That's what he was to all of us."

Others Pay Tribute.
"Tributes were also uttered by J. F. Schindler, Dr. Sigmund Hecht, Franz Eschweiler, Herman Reel and others. Rabbi Hecht said that he felt that Mr. Bostwick was in a sense a collaborator of his and that he had come to bay silent respect to his memory. He loved to pay tribute to a man engaged in the noble work of improving the condition of mankind. A man who could raise an objection to the teaching of ethics did not deserve the name of man. One of Mr. Bostwick's greatest virtues was his modesty. He had a better right to be a teacher than many."

"Mr. Schindler spoke of the sacrifices of such a life work as Mr. Bostwick had undertaken. It required faith in the righteousness of the cause and in his fellow men, for he did not know where he was coming out."

"Mr. Reel spoke feelingly. He said he was sure that the examples Mr. Bostwick had set would inspire the members to press on in the work."

"Mr. Eschweiler spoke from the standpoint of one not a member of the society, testifying to the name Mr. Bostwick had made for himself in the community."

ITALIAN ANTIQUITIES.

An Underground Trade in Them in Spite of Legal Interdictions.

Some days ago a well-known dealer in antiquities offered for sale to the Louvre museum, in Paris, a splendid collection of ancient silver vases from Italy or Greek or Italian workmanship, says the London News. The museum was unable to pay the price asked—£20,000—and declined the bargain. The Italian minister of education, having learned of this, has taken proceedings under the Pacca law against Sig. di Prisco, the owner of these antiquities. The latter is a large land owner at Bosco Reale. He secretly made excavations on his estate and found twenty-eight silver vases of remote antiquity. Notwithstanding the Italian law prohibiting owners of antiquities from sending them out of the country without leave, or, rather, on account of this law, which prevents old works of art from commanding anything like their natural price in the impoverished country, Sig. di Prisco smuggled his find out of Italy and offered it to a Paris dealer for £5,000. Continuing meanwhile his search, he found other silver vases, which duly joined their fellows in Paris, and the whole lot was offered to the Louvre. The Italian minister of education throws interesting light on the facilities which underpaid officials are supposed to afford illicit exporters of antiquities. He issues a notification that, should any officials be found to have connived at this latest evasion of the Pacca law, they will be criminally prosecuted.

Formidable Arctic Mosquitoes.

Some of the men who have gone to Alaska have returned to complain of the hard work, of the cold, the heat, the frost or the snow, but the real discouragement which makes life in the far north a great burden is the deadly mosquito, from whose insinuating bill there is no escape.

"They are there in such swarms that sometimes you seem to be looking at the sun through a snow storm," said H. A. Fredericks, of this city, yesterday. Mr. Fredericks has just returned from a long trip in the Yukon country, and it was to that region he had particular reference.

"They are the worst thing in the country," he continued, "and besides them the other difficulties amount to nothing. In the settlements they do not bother people much, but when a man goes up one of the creeks prospecting he must envelop his head in a mosquito frame of cheese cloth—their bills would go through netting like a knife through tissue paper—and must wear gloves and tie his trousers and shirt sleeves close about his ankles and wrists.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

FEAR A BIG STRIKE AMONG LEAF MEN

MANY KINDS OF PEOPLE GATHER AT EDGERTON.

Reporter Argues However, That They Have Been out of Work and Should Therefore, Appreciate Renumerative Employment.—1000 to 1500 People at Work There.

The fact that so much tobacco is being handled in this market this winter is looked upon by most people as a good deal of God send, and none has reason to appreciate it more than those who labor with their hands for a living, says the Edgerton Reporter. With a prospect for a long season's work before them they have ample reason to be thankful for the conditions of trade that has made it possible. And yet the labor question has begun to cause some uneasiness among a few of the packers who have bought largely of bundle tobacco. With employment of from 1,000 to 1,500 hands in a small town they fear the trouble of strikes. Their fears should be entirely unnecessary if the right kind of management is employed. Having passed through several winters without the usual employment in the warehouses, labor is certainly glad enough to know there is something to do now and will be pretty apt to be satisfied with anything like fair compensation. If trouble does arise we are inclined to believe it will come from the packers themselves. If a uniform price could be agreed upon for all divisions of warehouse work and the schedule strictly lived up to, it would tend to simplify matters a good deal. It would be suicidal in the extreme for the warehouse labor here to take a notion into their heads that by striking they could force a raise of wages. It is such an easy matter for the eastern packers to ship out their tobacco to other packing points to be handled, that such action would not accomplish any other result but deprive them of their chance to labor at all. The packing business is too valuable a perquisite to be ruined by such procedure.

About Heaters.

Are you satisfied with the way your stove heats the house, or is it a trifle small to do the work well? It costs no more to run a large heater so far as fuel is concerned than it does to run a small one. We have a large Radiant Home heater, considered by many to be the best stove made, it will heat lots of surface and yet is economical. We will make you a special figure on it if you want it. All the high grade heaters we have left will be sold at a sacrifice. Lowell Hardware Co.

A Little More Cost Brings Big Profit...

The addressing, folding, inclosing, sealing and stamping of five thousand circulars, with postage, will cost at least $65, whether the circular is good or bad. Notwithstanding this fixed charge, some strive to save a dollar or two on the cost of printing, although the goods advertised are to be judged by the character of the printing, just as a house is judged by the character of its salesmen. Good printing costs but little more, and that "little more" brings greater returns than any other part of the cost. Order your printing where good work is assured.

OUR DAY IN HISTORY.

1789—Thomas Ewing, statesman, born near West Liberty, O.; died 1871.

1804—Alexander Keith Johnston, noted Scottish geographer, born in Midlothian; died 1871.

1825—General James Wilkinson, soldier, died in the City of Mexico; born 1757.

Wilkinson entered the patriot army as captain in 1775 and served with Arnold in the expedition to Canada. He served as a staff officer during the war and became a general.

1859—Thomas Babington Macaulay, celebrated English historian; died; born 1800.

1870—Marshal Juan Prim, virtually the ruler of Spain, assassinated; died on the 20th; born 1814. Prim led the army and the cortes and helped overthrow Espartero in 1843. For this he was made count, a general and governor of Madrid. His life thereafter was a series of adventures and difficulties. He was in disgrace and exile and again a favorite at court. He helped overthrow Isabella and was the means of calling Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern to the throne. He next fixed upon the Italian prince Amadeus for the throne. Prim died the day Amadeus landed in Spain.

1890—Octave Feuillet, popular French novelist and dramatist, author of "The Romance of a Poor Young Man," died in Paris; born 1822.

1894—James G. Fair, American evangelist, died in San Francisco; born in Ireland 1811.

FOR CHIEF OF POLICE.

The election of W. H. Appleby as Chief Acheson's successor will receive hearty endorsement. Sheriff Appleby is a police officer of experience, integrity, discretion and great executive ability. He holds a record for some of the best police work ever done in the county.

The fact that the republican members of the common council have selected him as their candidate will be a source of general congratulation. The evils of partisan choice do not attach to such a selection. Sheriff Appleby's qualifications and not his politics recommend him for the place.

THE PACIFIC LIENS.

The government lien on the Union Pacific railroad may be released before Jan. 30. Had the Pacific railroad committee been made up of business men such action would have been taken long ago. Every time anything practical was attempted, however, the mover found himself crowded out of the committee. This was the case with Mr. Cooper of this district, and it has been the case with every man who back-bone made him obnoxious to the Pacific railroad lobby.

The reason will be apparent when the amounts involved are considered. More than $13,000,000 of the subsidy bonds issued by the government in aid of the Union Pacific, and more than $6,000,000 of like bonds issued in aid of the Central Pacific will be due and payable January 1. That is to say on that date the government will have to pay said sums as an indorser, or a loaner of its credit, to the corporation in question. And in addition to this indebtedness there will mature during 1897 more than $11,000,000 of such bonds, which must also be met by the government.

There is little or no room for doubt that the obligations of these roads might have been paid if honest and proper efforts had been made in that direction. But as a matter of fact, there has never been any intention to pay them. The roads were originally constructed on two controlling propositions—grand and petti larceny; and they have since been operated mainly in the interest of certain capitalists and speculators. They have served a useful purpose, indisputably in the development of the western country, but the fact remains that crookedness and corruption have pervaded their history from the start. How to deal with them, now that the necessity for some sort of action will soon become imperative, is a difficult one in every respect. The demand for some kind of legislative remedy is pressing, however, and the people are not in a mood to tolerate any trifling or any trading in the case.

CANINE FRIEND IN NEED.

How the Greyhound Rescued the Little Spaniel.

"Talk about the sagacity of dogs," remarked Jenkins, as he scornfully surveyed the records of the good deeds done by canines in general. "Well, I saw something the other day which beats the world—something which, in addition to proving the reasoning powers of dogs, showed also that some of them at least possess a great capacity for affection for their own kind. A friend of mine uptown owns several dogs, among the lot being a magnificent greyhound and a diminutive spaniel, the two dogs, notwithstanding the disparity in size, being warm friends. The other day the dog-catcher wagon was making the rounds and, as usual, missing the curs while corraling the animals which are well taken care of. It happened that my friend's front gate had been left open, and the two dogs mentioned escaped into the street just as the wagon turned the corner. There was a great cry on the part of the catchers, who grasped their nets and made a scramble for the little spaniel, not seeming to like the idea of tackling the big hound. The poor little spaniel realized her danger, and attempted to escape. She flew like one possessed in every direction, only to be headed off by the men with the nets and a score of small boys. She finally halted, panting, in the middle of the street, and one of the men approached her with his net. It seemed that the little thing's doom was sealed. Suddenly there was a fierce bark and the big greyhound came leaping into the crowd, scattering the small boys and compelling the catchers to take to the wagon. The hound reached the side of the spaniel and, taking in the situation, reached down, grasped his wee companion in his capacious mouth, and was off down the street like a shot. He didn't stop for the gate, but with a great, graceful leap, was over the fence, fled their enemies, while the spaniel on the ground, stood wagging his tail, as if knowing that he had discomfited their enemies, while the spaniel gamboled and made the welkin ring with her shrill barks. If that wasn't a great thing, I don't know."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

When Cod Become Blind.

Several large cod are kept in one of the tanks of the Amsterdam aquarium, necessarily near the surface, and therefore exposed to a strong light from above. Now, the cod, though not a "deep sea" fish, is not a surface swimmer and lives at depths where the sunlight must be very much modified by passage through the water. It lives in what to us would be semi-darkness. Every one of these cod exposed to the strong light is suffering from an extraordinary hypertrophy of the eye. The whole organ has become overgrown, as if in the effort to adjust itself to the use of more light rays it had become over-equipped and then useless. The cod, in fact, are blind.

The most interesting feature in this change is the extraordinary rapidity with which increased supply of light rays has over-developed the organ for its use. It has taken place, not by slow degrees from individual to individual, but in a course of time to be measured by months and in every individual in the tank. If this example is a measure of the rapidity with which such changes take place among fish, the adaptation of those creatures which have migrated from shallow waters of the deep seas, and by the total loss of enormous amount of their eyes and the light of illuminating organs to light it is, as may have been as rapid as a volcano.—London Spectator.

Piles Chinese Piledriver.

A new building driven in one of the punch. It for a foundation for a ameter and eight inches in diameter was driven into the ground. The frame for the building, and so was the round piece of timber, which was a center for iron, with a pole in to the hammerhead. Attached seven ropes, each were twenty-five feet long and the top of looking very much the outside, lashed Maypole. Two the old-fashioned hold of the ends, seven women, all together, pulled with a sing-a-scream, all let go; then, came on top the pile, down it protected by a band of women were paid 20 cents. The day. This Maypole driver is general use throughout Japan and elsewhere.

A Game for Travelers.

Here is an easy game wherever, while away the tedious hours of way traveling. Two players or more can engage in this simple pastime which consists in selecting certain animals, such as cows, horses, sheep and goats, and as the train whirled along through the fields, counting how many of each kind are to be seen in the fields and on the roads. Cows and sheep count one, horses two, and goats four each animal, and the best game consists in staking cows and goats against horses and sheep between certain stations or for a certain time by the watch, as is agreed. The winner is the one who counts the highest number of animals. The stakes may be fruit or chocolate sticks, and it adds greatly to the enjoyment of consumption, the having earned them by perceiving thirty more cows than our opponent sees horses.

The Useful X Ray.

EMIN PASHA'S PARROT.

Dies of Consumption After Entertaining Batavia Fifteen Years.

Dr. E. E. Snow of Batavia is mourning the loss of the most remarkable pet that has been brought to this part of the country for a long time. It was a parrot and had a past, as well as a wonderful personality. When the doctor was in Egypt in the days of Emin Pasha he made the acquaintance of that potentate, and on leaving for home said he would like to take with him one of the small gray parrots that are peculiar to the Nile country, especially on account of their intelligence. So the viceroy sent out an attendant, who soon returned with one. He was called Pasha, in honor of Emin, and was all that has been reported of its species.

Pasha could talk, especially swear, in the best Arabic, and though he soon learned English enough to hold a conversation equal to some people, he never learned to swear in English. When any one was to be gone over in the bird's best style of vituperation it was the language of the Nile that was adopted for the purpose. Pasha liked America, and lived here fifteen years. The bird was a good friend when acquaintance was once formed, but a casual visitor was his special aversion, and he made use of the strongest notes of disapproval when subjected to any intrusion. His vocabulary was large, and he knew how to use it as some people, even, could not.

But he was so unfortunate as to take into close friendship a man of the family who had consumption, and caught the disease from him. A violent hemorrhage ended Pasha's life.—Buffalo correspondence of New York Press.

Roman Canals in Britain.

The first canals in Britain were constructed by the Romans. Of these the most remarkable are the Caer Dyke and Foss Dyke cuts in Lincolnshire, which are by general consent admitted to have been of Roman origin. The former extends from Peterborough to the River Witham, near the city of Lincoln, a distance of about forty miles; and the latter from Lincoln to the River Trent, near Torksey, a distance of eleven miles. Of the Caer Dyke the name only now remains, but the Foss Dyke, though of Roman origin, still exists, and is the oldest British canal. Foss Dyke, according to Camden, was deepened and rendered more navigable in 1121 by Henry I. About 1841 it was widened to the minimum breadth of 45 feet and deepened to the extent of six feet throughout, and thus this ancient canal, which is quoted by Telford and Nimmo as "the oldest artificial canal in Britain," was restored to a state of perfect efficiency, at a cost of forty thousand pounds.

A Novel Magnesium Light.

Magnesium powder is placed between two thin impenetrable sheets of paper which are coated with paste. They are then stuck together. After drying, a sheet of paper impregnated with potassium chlorate is placed on each side of the package. For an envelope a wider sheet of paper is pasted about the packet, so that the whole forms a thick leaf of paper, which can be cut with a scissors into strips. To produce the light one of the strips is held in a tongs and ignited, when it burns with a brilliant magnesium light. The magnesium paper prepared in this way is claimed to be durable and entirely free from danger.

What a great quantity of work a "good housekeeper" finds to do! There are so many little time-and-strength-taking chores that have no names. If a woman is in good health there is no more healthful employment than housework. Generally speaking, there is no happier woman in the world. But how different when every breath is pain, every step torture! This state of health, in nine cases out of ten comes from derangements of the delicate, feminine organs of generation. The family doctor inquires first concerning these. He most usually insists upon an "examination." From this the modest woman naturally shrinks. She is right. Excepting in very unusual cases of female weakness" examinations are unnecessary. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a simple, natural remedy for these ills. It cures safely, permanently.

FREE TO EVERY MAN

THE METHOD OF A GREAT TREATMENT FOR WEAKNESS OF MEN.

WHICH CURED HIM AFTER EVERYTHING ELSE FAILED.

Painful diseases are bad enough, but when a man is slowly wasting away with nervous weakness, the mental forebodings are ten times more than the most severe pain. There is no let up to the mental suffering day or night. Sleep is almost impossible and under such a strain men are scarcely responsible for what they do. For years the writer rolled and tossed on the troubled sea of sexual weakness until it was a question whether he had not better take a dose of poison and thus end all his troubles. But providential inspiration came to him and in the shape of a combination of stamps necessary to mail the information, but send for it, and learn that there are a few things on earth that although they cost nothing to get they are worth a fortune to some men and mean a lifetime of happiness to most of us. Write to Thomas Slater, Box 44, Kalamazoo, Mich., and the information will be mailed in a plain sealed envelope.

I am not a philanthropist, nor do I pose as an altruist, but there are thousands of men suffering the mental tortures of nervous weakness who would be cured at once could they but get such a remedy as the one that cured me. Do not try to study out how I can afford to pay the few postage stamps necessary to mail the information, but send for it, and learn that there are a few things on earth that although they cost nothing to get they are worth a fortune to some men and mean a lifetime of happiness to most of us. Write to Thomas Slater, Box 44, Kalamazoo, Mich., and the information will be mailed in a plain sealed envelope.

A Blacksmith's Story.

I was working as a blacksmith and horse shoe w when my health failed to such a degree that I was unable to do any work and was suffering greatly from kidney trouble and the whole nervous system seemed entirely beyond control. I tried many so-called remedies and employed several physicians with little or no benefit. I then consulted M. A. Morehouse, a specialist, who prepared remedies for me which were used with the most gratifying result. In a very short time I was not only able to resume work as a blacksmith but also to stand under and shoe horses from morning until night with as little fatigue as in former years, and I did the work of a strong, healthy man all that winter.

The medicines prepared for me were not only wonderfully prompt in their action but the benefit received permanent and lasting.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD THIS AFTERNOON.

Pall Bearers Were Members of The Milwaukee Ethical Society, Who Accompanied the Remains to The City This Morning—Something of his Life and Work.

Into the grave at Oak Hill cemetery, all that was mortal of Morris M. Bostwick was lowered this afternoon. The funeral was held at 1 o'clock, the hour having been changed, to allow those from Milwaukee to return on an afternoon train. The pall bearers were members from the Ethical society, those selected being Cassius M. Paine, William Kaumheimer, Leon and William Katzenstein, E. M. Katz and F. F. Heath. The remains arrived in Janesville at 9:30 o'clock, over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, the relatives, pallbearers and others coming in a special car. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. V. E. Southworth. Among those present from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. E. Katz, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Whitman, Mrs. Winterhalter, Mrs. Charles Bellack, of Milwaukee.

Was Ill But Two Weeks

Mr. Bostwick died at the Wisconsin general hospital at Milwaukee, at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, of pneumonia. He was taken sick about two weeks ago with what appeared to be a severe attack of the grip, but on Wednesday last typhoid symptoms began to appear and it was deemed advisable to remove him to the hospital. His condition continued to grow worse and it was so alarming Saturday morning that his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bostwick were sent for and a consultation of physicians called. The father and mother, his wife and cousin, Joseph L. Bostwick, who was already in the city, were with him when he died.

The news of the death of their lecturer came as a great shock to the members of the Ethical society, many of whom were not aware of the seriousness of his sickness. A dress rehearsal of the fairy tale tableaux had been called for the evening, and those who were to take part met to learn the sorrowful news. It was decided that the performance should be postponed.

Was Born in Janesville.

Mr. Bostwick was born in Janesville, Nov. 20, 1863. He received a common school education and studied for the bar. He was admitted to practice, but did not find the profession to his liking and so continued to assist his father in the store, devoting his spare time to literary work and study. The study of ethical culture was included, and he delivered a series of lectures on the subject at All Souls church. Later Mr. Bostwick prepared and delivered several lectures, and in the fall of 1895 went to Milwaukee to interest some of his acquaintances there in the formation of an ethical society. The plan was mentioned by the newspapers and sufficient names were secured to append to a call for an organization meeting, which was held at the club room of the Pfister. Several meetings were subsequently held in the Goldsmith building, and the Luning Conservatory building being vacant it became the Ethical building and the future home of the society. It was opened to the public Oct. 27, 1895. The Milwaukee Sentinel spoke of Mr. Bostwick's work in that city as follows: "Mr. Bostwick arranged section-work and became also the society's regular lecturer. Last summer, when he was given a vacation, he spent the time in visiting the shops and factories of the city during the noon hour, addressing the operatives on the subject of ethical culture."

Work Attracted Attention.

"In this manner he visited nearly every manufacturing in the city and accomplished a work that soon began to attract the attention of the other Ethical societies throughout the country. He was given credit for doing practical work. In many ways the Milwaukee society broke records; although the youngest of any in the country, no small achievement being that of getting a membership of over 300 inside a year. When Mr. Bostwick attended a congress of Ethical societies at St. Louis a little less than a year ago, he was eagerly questioned about the Milwaukee society, and instead of getting points, had to give them. In manner he was unassuming. The members of the society looked upon him as a man who was developing, and who had a great future before him, owing to his studious nature and the absolute conviction that lay back of every action. He had planned for himself a life of self-sacrifice. Before coming to Milwaukee he had gotten together a library of ethical and kindred literature that numbered hundreds of volumes, one probably without its counterpart in the country. He was constantly adding to it, and took great pride in its character and scope."

"He was married December 17, 1895, to Mildred Whitney, of Oconomowoc, since which time his wife has been one of his most effective workers in the society."

Mrs. H. K. Whitton

Mrs. H. K. Whitton, a prominent figure in Janesville society some years ago, died in Chicago this morning. Mrs. Whitton, whose maiden name was Miss Lander, had charge, for years, of Dr. Fayette Durlin's parish school. While there she was married to H. K. Whitton, nephew of the late chief justice, and visited Europe with him. They took up their home in Chicago, having a handsome residence in Groveland Park, and lived there until Mr. Whitton's death some years ago. Since then Mrs. Whitton has spent much of her time in Europe. Two sons and a daughter survive her, the daughter being now in Europe, and the sons, L. Kirk, and Starr, are in business in Chicago. Mrs. Whitton was a woman of high ideas and strong individuality, and was a potent influence in whatever circle she was placed.

Mrs. Archie Galbraith.

Mrs. Archie Galbraith, wife of the former proprietor of the Park Hotel, died at her home in Scotland on December 12, of pneumonia, the news of her demise having been received a day or two ago. Many Janesville friends, who knew Mrs. Galbraith will mourn her demise, and extend sympathy to the afflicted ones.

Mary Irene Vickerman.

Mary Irene Vickerman, the three months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Vickerman of the town of Lima, died this morning at 2:30 o'clock of pneumonia. The funeral will be held at St. Mary's church at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

LOWELL the hustler will have a January sale of stoves that will be most interesting to economical people, watch for his announcement tomorrow evening.

It does not require much advertising to sell any kind of goods at cost, especially so, where goods are all fresh and latest styles. Actual cost of goods is figured differently, by different business men. Some add a certain per cent. to the actual money invested to put the goods in the store, for expenses, which their way of figuring, is actual cost. My goods are marked at actual cash value to me, nothing added to the actual money invested in each article. Then you readily see, you can buy any piece of furniture in stock, at wholesale prices, all cash discounts deducted, and simply freight and cartage added. All I have to advertise for is to have the people come and get price and know what I am doing. Those who bought goods the past two years in January, can tell you all about it. The sale is strictly cash, and January 1st is the first day, and February 1st is the last. Make no mistake. W. H. Ashcraft, furniture and undertaking.

APPLEBY WILL BE THE NEXT MARSHAL

COUNCIL LIKELY TO ELECT HIM TONIGHT.

Six Republican Aldermen Will Vote for Him, and the Four Democrats for Officer Hogan—Chief Acheson's Resignation to be Sent in This Evening.

W. H. Appleby will, in all probability, be elected city marshal and chief of police by the common council at tonight's session.

This being the last meeting before Chief Acheson assumes the office of sheriff, he will hand in his resignation tonight, and his successor will probably be elected at once, in order that there may be no vacancy.

Sheriff Appleby and Officer John W. Hogan are the leading candidates for the position and it is said that the choice will be made on strictly political lines. It is said that the six republicans—Aldermen Heddies, Stearns, Burnham, Stoddard, Inman and Jones—will vote solidly for Mr. Appleby, and the four democrats—Aldermen McKee, Kothman, McLean and Milmore—will vote for Mr. Hogan. This insures Mr. Appleby's election.

The fact is cited that Officer Hogan has been prominent in the democratic councils and was an ardent supporter of Bryan and Sewell. Therefore, it is argued, he cannot complain if political lines are drawn in the present case.

Political lines have not always been drawn rigidly in this connection but in every preceding case the issue turned on the competency of candidates. This is not true in the present contest, and a vote on party lines seems to offer the only solution.

There are other reasons lying back of the demand for Sheriff Appleby's election. Many republicans insist that Officer Hogan, forgetting the fact of elections by republican common council, was an active partisan in the last campaign and that republicans, therefore, hardly can be expected to support him now. This has helped to make the election of Mr. Appleby practically certain.

The fact that Mayor Baines exhausted his resources in endeavoring to oust Chief Spencer from the fire department, for purely party considerations, regardless of his well known efficiency—to make room for a democrat, has not tended to help the cause of democratic officials with the republican aldermen. At that time politics cut all the figure in the world, but now the mayor and other supporters of Officer Hogan, are arguing that politics should not enter into the matter.

Republican aldermen, therefore, find their duty clear—they were elected as republicans, and must serve as republicans.

COINCIDENCE OF NAMES.

It Led to the Arrest of a Woman for Forging a Pension Check.

United States Deputy Marshal Brennan arrested Mrs. Daniel Williamson of Crescent, St. Louis County, yesterday, and last evening she was arraigned before United States Commissioner Gray on a charge of forging the indorsement to a pension check. She was accompanied by her husband, and was admitted to bail on their recognizance in $1,000 to appear for hearing next Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Williamson have a defense, which, if substantiated, stamps the case as one out of the ordinary. Mrs. Lurenda Crowder, of this city, a colored lady, has been receiving pensions here. When she signed her certificate last July she directed that the check be sent to her at Glencoe, St. Louis County, as she intended to move there. In due season the check reached Glencoe, but she had not arrived there, and the postmaster knew of no person of that name. The check was payable to "Lurenda Crowder, now Williamson," and the letter was so addressed. Finally the postmaster sent the letter to Mrs. Williamson, supposing, in the absence of any other claimant, that it must be hers. Her name before marrying Williamson was Lurenda Trower, and it seemed to him a fair conclusion that the writer of the letter must be "Lurenda Trower, now Williamson," and that a slip of the pen had changed "Crowder" instead of "Trower."

It chanced that Mrs. Williamson, who had been expecting a remittance from her father in California, and had custom to send her a pension check occasionally. When she saw her Crowder's check she supposed that it was from her husband. Still, the mistaken husband, "Lurenda" troubled her at the address, and it was only after venturing vice of neighbors, a citizen of Glencoe cashed it.

A St. Louis man Crowder appeared in the department at Glencoe and mean while, at Glencoe and he peeped at the check, and then he called for "Louis Globe-Democrat" story came out.

Sold by all Local Druggists.

A BLIND TRAVELER.

He Finds His Way Alone Along the Roads of California.

Gilbert Watkins is the name of a blind man who lives on Brush street, near Taylor. Although he is blind he cannot tell day from night, even though he looks directly at the sun, it does not interfere with his ability to travel. In fact, Watkins does more traveling than most other people except druggists. And, furthermore, he does the most of it without any one to guide him. Watkins, when he is in the city, can be seen standing on the corners of some of the down-town streets, where he sells notions and other small articles in order to gain a livelihood. But he does not stay long at a time, because he likes to visit different places and meet different people. He always attends the different celebrations and fiestas, where he says he is sure to enjoy himself. When Watkins wants to go any place the first time he gets some one to guide him if possible, but after that he can go alone at any time he wishes. He has been over nearly all of the roads in California, and only a few months ago he walked from this city to Los Angeles by himself. He says he is always well treated and finds people only too willing to tell him what is going on. According to Watkins' story he is able to do these remarkable things solely by his memory, and says that he can be taken anywhere and made to turn as many corners as desired, and that he can find his way back without assistance. In this respect he seems to have the same faculty as a cat is said to have and exercise it in the same way. When the blind man desires to go to a certain place he has never been taken before he is led to it, and as he goes along he takes mental note of all the objects he passes. Here is a rough crossing, here some asphaltum pavement, here a dirt road with stones on it, here some water, etc. When he wants to return he takes them in reverse order and has no trouble.

"The reason I can do this," he says, "is because I don't see a lot of things that distract me. You could do the same thing easy enough. Maybe in a mile I would only have to remember a few objects. It is just the same as if a man who could see was taken through a dark alley, but every once in a while was given a glimpse of his surroundings by a light being turned on. He could remember what he saw without any trouble, but if he saw a thousand other things he could not. I know just how many steps it is from the corner to where I live and can walk to the place without even using my cane. Of course, I am helped a great deal by the people I pass, because they know I am blind and always make room for me."—San Francisco Call.

The Ingenious Akhoond.

Much inquiry has convinced me that hypnotism or mesmerism cum trickery is largely practiced among the Afghans and is a great source of power among the priesthood. The people being entirely ignorant and very superstitious lend themselves very readily to suggestion, and have unbounded powers of faith. In connection with this, a certain very cynical and skeptical Persian mirza (scribe), who was at one time employed by the Indian foreign office to obtain information about the famous Akhoond of Swat, Abdul Gaffoor, and lived for a considerable time at his shrine, tells me a curious story. He says that Akhoond was a past master in hypnotism and mesmerism, which were the backbone of his power, and that there were no limits to the delusions with which he would impress the ignorant tribesmen who visited him. The mirza informs me that the Akhoond used to rub the wooden walls of his house in places with camphor, musk and such like spices, before an interview with a religious inquirer; and then by putting a closed cashmere brazier of hot coals within a hidden recess under the wall, he used to claim the odor gradually worked out of the wall by the heat as a manifestation of the Ruh-ul-Khuddas (the Holy Ghost)—the odor of sanctity due to his very potent prayer! The way for hypnotism, suggestion, etc., being thus generally paved, faith did the rest.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A Home-Keeping Inhabitant.

"Lived here thirty years, and yet never saw the city?"

"Never."

"Did you ever have a desire to go to town?"

"Well, yes, I reckon I has. But you see, 'fore the railroad came hit wuz too fur ter travel on foot, an' the mule was too busy plowin' an' arter the railroad come, they went ter chargin' people fer travelin', an' so I jest thought I'd stay home an' not bother 'bout seein' the world. But what do you reckon happened ter us 'tother day?"

"Don't know."

"Well, sir, my son John ackchully bought a ticket, jumped aboard of the railroad, went ter the city an' subscribed fer a newspaper!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Bees Bounce Clerks and Customers.

A swarm of bees took possession of Twells & Beamer's grocery store, a big establishment at Logansport, Ind. After driving the proprietors, clerks and customers into the street, they devoured twenty pounds of honey. The bees held the fort for three hours, when they were driven out by the fumes of burning sulphur.

America's Freight Cars.

At the present time there are owned and controlled by the railroads and private companies of America nearly 1,250,000 freight cars, or, in other words, enough cars to make two continuous trains reaching from Boston to San Francisco, with an engine for every forty-five cars.

A College Student as Blacksmith.

At Cornell all the mechanical engineering students have to learn seven trades. One of these trades, that of blacksmith, is very distasteful to some of the students, but it has to be learned all the same. One young fellow, who was unusually averse to soiling his hands, begged hard to be exempted from wearing the leather apron, but the professor took special care that there was nothing lacking in thoroughness of his training at the forge. Last fall the student went to the professor and thanked him for being compelled to learn blacksmithing. "You see," he said, "I am now superintendent of a mine away back in Colorado. Last summer our main shaft broke and there was no one in the mine but myself who could weld it. I didn't like the job, but took off my coat and welded that shaft. It wasn't a pretty job, but she's running now. If I couldn't have done it I'd have had to pack that shaft on mule back and sent it 300 miles over the mountains to be fixed, and the mine would have had to shut down till it got back. My ability to mend that shaft raised me in the eyes of every man in the mine and the boss raised my salary."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Oxygen Drunks.

For those who are in search of novelties oxygen intoxication will perhaps commend itself. It has the merit of being out of the ordinary, but can be obtained through the medium of a new machine designed for family use. Of course, it is not intended that families should use the machine to get drunk, but they can do so if they desire. One of the machines will furnish 2 per cent. of extra oxygen to a whole house if desired, but for ordinary purposes one-half of 1 per cent. would be ample. Two per cent. would unduly exhilarate the inmates, causing them to skip around and behave themselves in a manner too undignified. There are other uses for this novel apparatus. One of the machines placed in front of the furnace door in winter will make the fire much hotter and save a large part of the fuel.—New York Letter in Exchange.

A Political Reason.

"He is so very rich," said he, "He will might scorn the place; And hard indeed it is to see Just why he runs the race!"

"Let not that problem give you pause; These campaign tricks are cunning; He only runs, my friend, because The other fellow's running."

—Atlanta Constitution

Mastered.

"Billingshurst says he has mastered his typewriter at last," said the married man.

"Does he mean a machine or a girl?" asked the single man, who often tried to be funny.

"The machine, of course," said the married one, wearily. "Didn't I just tell you he has mastered it?"

How To Prevent Pneumonia.

At this time of the year a cold is very easily contracted, and if left to run its course without the aid of some reliable cough medicine is liable to result in that dread disease, pneumonia. We know of no better remedy to cure a cough or cold than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it quite extensively and it has always given entire satisfaction.—Olagah, Ind. Ter. Chief.

This is the only remedy that is known to be a certain preventive of pneumonia. Among the many thousands who have used it for colds and grippe, we have never yet learned of a single case having resulted in pneumonia. Persons who have weak lungs or have reason to fear an attack of pneumonia, should keep the remedy at hand. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale at C. D. Don't be persuaded into buying liniments without reputation or merit—Chamberlain's Pain Balm costs no more and its merits have been proven by a test of many years. Such letters as the following, from L. G. Bagley, Hueneme, Cal., are constantly being received: "The best remedy for pain I have ever used is Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and I say so after having used it in my family for several years." It cures rheumatism, lame back, sprains and swellings. For sale at C. D. Stevens' pharmacy, corner Main and Milwaukee streets.

After hearing some friends continually praising Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, Curtis Fleck, of Anaheim, California, purchased a bottle of it for his own use and is now as enthusiastic over its wonderful work as anyone can be. THE ERRING BURGLAR.

Acquitted, He Is Found at His Old Ways Again.

A curious romance of burglary and filial affection is told in the French newspapers. It has generally been supposed to be almost impossible to escape from the French penal settlement at Cayenne, and that the perils to be confronted in the forests, both from animals and natives, not to talk of starvation, appalled the convicts to such an extent that they never even thought of attempting flight. This theory has just received a severe shock, the description of no less than thirty recently escaped convicts having been circulated to the police by the minister of the interior. One or two have already been captured in France. Among these is a certain Petitjean, who is accused of new misdeeds. Petitjean escaped from Guiana some time ago, for no other reason, he said, than to come and embrace his old mother, who lives at Bagnole. He was arrested, but, in deference to public opinion, which was impressed by his filial affection, he was set at liberty and allowed to remain in France. A fortnight ago a robbery took place on the Boulevard Diderot, in Paris, and by tracing back the stolen goods four persons were arrested. They were all carrying knives, knuckledusters and revolvers, and made a most desperate fight for their liberty. Once in prison, however, they confessed they belonged to a large gang whose chief was Petitjean. Hence the latter's arrest.

CIGAR AS A SOCIAL FORCE.

Bright Young Man Insists on Teaching His Father to Smoke.

That adage about the child being father to the man receives an odd interpretation by a young man who lives in Oak Park. He thinks it means that the child should run things and make the old man stand around. This bright young man lives with his father in bachelor apartments. It chanced that the old gentleman led an exemplary life in his younger days and had never learned to smoke. The son, however, being thoroughly up to the times, is very fond of his cigar, and many a colloquy ensued. When the father came home to find the rooms redolent of cigar smoke he would argue with his son that it was no nice way to do, and that he should respect the feelings of those who objected to it. "But, father," objected the young man, "you must recognize the fact, the cigar is a great social smoke. Father, you must learn to smoke. It is an accomplishment of every gentleman, and you should not overlook it." The next day he brought his father a cigar and a pipe for his father. The old gentleman, who has spent the old gentleman, who smoke without years in this vale of or solace of toying the comforts ously to learn to began industrials he gave it up. After three defeat. His son said confessed his gars and the pipe was all the ci-reverent young man then to an ir-the story.

Cleveland's New Home.

The house in which Presk land will live after his retirement is a picturesque mansion in a pretty part of Princeton, J. The house is not one which one would suppose would be occupied by a man of Mr. Cleveland's wealth. It is a large, roomy structure, and an appearance of age that it does not deserve. It is built of stuccoed brick and brown stone in the old colonial style. Its dimensions are 30 feet wide by 45 feet deep and two stories and a half high. Three sides of it are surrounded by porches. Through its middle runs a wide, old-fashioned hall, at the right of which is the staircase. The flooring of the hall is in hard wood, but there are no other hard wood floors in the house. The rooms, fifteen in number, are all very large, and the ceilings are 12 feet high. One-half of the first floor is given up to the parlor. The house was built in 1854 by Commodore Stockton, a line descendent of Richard

Hall Caine and Ruskin.

Mr. Hall Caine, the novelist, says: "Mr. Ruskin's works were to me from the first of my reading a great stimulus to thought and I think a great impulse to moral endeavor. The author himself also, at a very early stage of my life as a man of letters, gave me great help and encouragement. A year or two ago I visited him at his house in Coniston, and there lives in my memory now the pleasantest recollections of a beautiful and noble personality."

Two Remarkable Words.

It is said that there are only two words in the English language that contain all the vowels in their order. They are "abstemious" and "facetious."

IN PRAISE OF THE WHEEL.

Upon Which Age Itself Rides Back to Youth.

Blessed be the man, say I, who invented bicycles! He builded better than he knew. When he fashioned the first wheel he unconsciously gave women the long sought for secret of perennial youth. This thought came irresistibly upon me Sunday morning as I waited at Broad street station for a belated train. While standing there a woman passed whom I knew to be a grandmother. I had to look a second time. Clad in her bicycle costume she looked not a day over 25; her divided skirt and perfectly fitting jacket, opening over a white blouse, were of soft gray serge; on her feet were dainty patent leather shoes and the trimmest of gray cloth gaiters outlined the girlish slenderness of her shapely legs. A white stock at her throat and a sailor hat completed this costume, as chic and modest and as lady like as the most adverse bicycle critic could desire. And she a grandmother. Shades of Martha Washington and our colonial ancestors!

Then at the pretty "Wheel," the popular bicycle club of Marion, new revelations awaited me. There was a dignified matron in divided skirt and leggings who rode gayly in with her husband and two boys, and as she jumped off her wheel and tripped across the lawn one would have sworn 16 was the limit of her years. Truly, yes, the inventor of the bicycle builded better than he knew, and let us hope that he was no hater of women—that, indeed, would be the refinement of cruelty if the power of rejuvenation had been given woman by some crusty critic of her sex. But after all wouldn't that be what is called poetical justice?—Philadelphia Record.

FACTS ABOUT RATTLERS.

A Snake Where Huckleberries Grow—Deer as Snake Fighters.

"Wherever you find huckleberries," said a native of the Moosic Mountain region, of this county, "you will find rattlesnakes and trout, and no malaria. Rattlesnakes are more plentiful in the huckleberry woods of Wayne county than they have been for years, and they get more numerous every year. One reason for this is that deer have got scarcer, in fact, are virtually extinct in Wayne county, although in the bordering counties of Pike and Monroe they are still abundant. Deer are born enemies of rattlesnakes, and kill hundreds of them every year where there are any to kill, visiting their haunts and stamping them beneath their feet. Hogs are also death on rattlesnakes, and if there were wild hogs in our woods they would soon clean out the snakes. Strong proof that rattlesnakes are always found where huckleberries are plentiful is to be found in Potter county, Pa. In only one corner of that county are huckleberries to be found, the northeast corner, on a high, barren mountain, known as Huckleberry Hill. That is the only locality in the county where a rattlesnake can be found, and there they abound by the thousand. People go from fifty miles around to that big huckleberry patch every season to pick berries, and it is estimated that they kill a rattlesnake to every bushel of berries they pick. This hill is on Susquehanna waters. The Allegheny by a man of Mr. Cleveland's wealth rises only a mile or so distant, and flows clear across the county, but an appearance of age that it does not deserve. It is built of stuccoed brick and brown stone in the old colonial style. Its dimensions are 30 feet wide by 45 feet deep and two stories and a half high. Three sides of it are surrounded by porches. Illinois Kisses Are Worth It.

The Circuit Court of Illinois has fixed the price of a stolen kiss. A farmer who stole a kiss from a pretty girl was sued for $15,000. The court gave the girl $250. This is a pretty stiff price for a kiss, but Illinois girls may think that is cheap enough.—Ex.
